LOCAL RELIEF FUND

Street Light Fund $36.50
 Miss Julia Nichols 5.00
 J. F. Whiting 5.00
 Robert Mitchell 5.00
 Mrs. Jeanette Schmidt 3.00

Say, folks, is that the way you feel about it? Will 700 of you contribute to the Red Cross for relief work abroad and only four come through for our own needy?

When you ate your Thanksgiving dinner did you stop to think of the people who were thankful for only the plainest and cheapest of food? And of some of them with their insufficient clothes for the coming winter? Well think about it now and see if your heart and your pocketbook won't give a dollar or two.

"Charity begins at home" and while we approve of your subscription to foreign relief we insist that the local relief fund is much more important. The committee requires about $800 but the News is only asking for $300 toward this total fund. A dollar from each subscriber will oversubscribe our quota, but of course it is not expected that every one will give, so some of you will give larger amounts.

Give as you have been prospered. It is more blessed to give than to receive—it really is.

The local relief committee will have charge of distributing all money, clothes and food. Any and all of these may be left at the News office. They are needed, badly needed. Won't you do your part and do it now?

RED CROSS ROLL CALL

The volunteer solicitors have done their work well, visiting practically every family in town. Any who have not been called upon are requested to renew their membership at headquarters (Rainier Hotel, 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.) or to telephone Green 22 or Black 88 for a solicitor to call.

Many appear to overlook the fact that their present Red Cross membership expires next month and that this is the time to renew for 1920.

Others seem to feel that there is no more work for the Red Cross, but even here we still have ex-soldiers or their families coming in who sometimes need help until their government allowance is secured.

Who promised to come? Headquarters have not yet arrived. It is earnestly desired that all these come in this week and save our solicitors making another call. We need all of these and almost as many more to reach our quota of 700.

At noon Wednesday 659 members were enrolled. Will not some of our many "one-to-a family" memberships change to 100 per cent families?

On account of storms in the north the Pacific division has extended the Roll Call period to Nov. 30 and our headquarters will be open till then but we are anxious to have all promised memberships in this week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Crow sold their home on North Lima street and bought a new home at Ocean Beach, near San Diego, where their son and daughter reside. With much regret their old neighbors and friends saw them depart for their new home Nov. 6th.

BAZAAR A SUCCESS

The bazaar given under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of the Church of the Ascension proved highly successful in every way.

The musical programs during the afternoons given by local talent under the direction of Mrs. H. I. Hawxhurst were thoroughly enjoyed.

Thursday afternoon piano numbers by Master Bob Mitchell were received with enthusiasm. His technique, together with his interpretive abilities, for one so young, promises more than a bright future in a musical way.

The solo numbers of Mrs. C. B. Klunk, Mrs. F. L. C. Roess, together with the duet number of Mrs. J. N. Hawks and Mrs. H. I. Hawxhurst, to which they responded with an encore, were all heartily applauded and Miss Frances Webster as accompanist proved herself very capable.

Friday afternoon there were vocal solos by Mrs. J. N. Hawks and Mrs. Donald Ashmore. Both received encores, as also the saxophone solos of Karl Hart, accompanied by Miss Webster.

By special request Mrs. Hawks and Mrs. Hawxhurst presented a duet number.

The main feature, a presentation of Oscar Wilde's clever play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," which was produced two nights, Thursday and Friday, met with the decided approval of the audience, which filled the club auditorium each evening.

Under the able coaching and management of Mesdames H. E. Allen and J. H. Wright, a well selected cast played their parts with marked ability and ease. Mrs. J. N. Hawks, who appeared for the first time in any theatrical production, carried off the honors in her characterization of Lady Bracknell. Dr. Chester H. Brown, another novice before the footlights, exhibited marked ability as Algernon Moncrieff. Hon. Gwendolyn Fairfax could not have been more ably interpreted than by Mrs. H. E. Allen, who is a recognized star in the profession. The Misses Helen G. Williams and Yelda Appleby as Cecily Cardew and Miss Prism (governess) respectively, held the audience by their clever acting. J. N. Hawks, as Rev. Canon Chasuble, who is always good in character parts, caused many to wonder if his real profession was that of the business manager of the bazaar.

As a lover, Mr. H. Perry caused many a sigh of regret from the emotional maidens present. The old standbys, Elliott Rhodes as the manservant, and Jack Wright, as butler, brought many memories of the period when the servant question was not one of the economic problems of the day. Both played typical manservants' parts with ability and propriety.

The total net proceeds of the bazaar will run in the neighborhood of $500, which money will be applied to the building fund of the proposed parish house.

Mr. and Mrs. George Mesecar have returned to their home here after an absence of two months, visiting relatives. Mr. Mesecar was at Lowell, Mich., and Mrs. Mesecar at Long Beach.

"Factories and railroads are good up to a certain point; but courage and endurance, love of wife and child, love of home and country, love of lofty endeavor, the homely virtues and the heroic virtues—these are better still, and if they are lacking, no piled up riches, no roaring industrialism shall avail either the individual or the nation.

ENGLISH OAK MOST DURABLE
Specimens of It Have Been Known to Survive in Good Preservation for Centuries.

The durability of English oak is the greatest of any known forest timber, discoveries having been made that it is preserved almost as well under water through centuries as it is when shielded by roofs in ancient castles.

Professor Burnett of London possessed a piece of English oak from King John's palace at Eltham, perfectly sound and strong, which can be traced back for more than five hundred years. The oaken shrine of Edward the Confessor is more than eight hundred years old. One of the oaken coronation chairs in Westminster abbey has been there for more than five centuries.

In Gloucester cathedral there are thirty-one stalls of rich tabernacle work executed in oak in the reign of Edward III, and beautifully perfect. When the foundations of the old Savoy palace in London, built 700 years previously, were torn down, the piles, many of which were of oak, were found in a state of perfect soundness. A vessel, found in the river Rother, in Kent, said to date back to the time of King Alfred, was found to be sound despite the fact that its oaken keel had been buried in the mud. An oak boat was found near Brigg in an almost perfect condition, despite the fact it was nearly two hundred years old.—Detroit News.

The Story of Shellac.
The useful shellac is the product of an insect. As soon as it emerges into the world, the insect looks around for a suitable place to commence operations which consists of thrusting its beak into the trunk of a tree on which it was born. In this manner it absorbs a quantity of the sap which is exuded from the pores of its body until it is completely covered. The insects are scraped from the surface of the tree trunk and then treated and cleaned until the shellac of commerce is the result.

Monarch of the Herd
Leader of Band of Elks in Western Manitoba Magnificent Specimen of the Species.

The king of all the elk surviving on the North American continent is believed to be the leader of a herd of 8,000 animals on the Riding mountain reserve in western Manitoba.

This magnificent specimen of a dying race was reported by woodsmen sent out recently by the Manitoba government to take a census of the herd.

After a close-up view of the noble beast, they estimated the spread of its main antlers at 80 inches, believed to be the greatest in the world. With the prongs included, they declare, the 80 inches would be greatly increased.

The great buck, according to the woodsmen, is in his prime, and in physical proportions stands out in the herd like a veritable monarch.

The four woodsmen sent out to take the census of the herd watched for days at the feeding places. Their combined estimates on a strictly conservative basis places the number of elk at 8,000. At a distance of 40 yards they counted as many as 1,000 animals in a single bunch.

AILEEN RIGGIN,
WATER SPRITE

Fourteen-Year-Old American Girl Who Won a First in the Diving Contest for Women in the Olympic Games

AILEEN RIGGIN, water sprite—that's just exactly what she is—this little American girl champion diver of the Olympic games at Antwerp. You see, spirit and sprite are pretty close linguistic relatives. One use of spirit is to convey the suggestion of the immaterial and Aileen, who is but fourteen years old, weighs only 70 pounds. To see her in swimming costume walking along between Ethelda Bleibtrey and Charlotte Boyle, is to laugh, for her head comes up just to their shoulders and she is all over the sprite by contrast with these two Venus-de-Miloesque young American champion swimmers.

Then, too, spirit and "spright" are close relatives and both carry the ideas of cheer, good humor, liveliness, sprightliness, vivacity, animation, energy, ardor, enthusiasm and courage—and Aileen has all of these admirable qualities.

Finally, a sprite is a sort of fairy, fay, sylph, nymph, mermaid, and nixie. And Aileen—slender and straight, not yet come to her woman's gracious inheritance of pleasing curves, with blue eyes and skin tanned darker than her blonde hair—looks the part to perfection. The sight of her poised high in the air in the high-diving contest at Antwerp is one long to be remembered as a glimpse of a fabled Undine come to visit favored mortals and defeat the women of earth in the sports of her own realm.

The grand farewell appearance of the athletes took place in the stadium and the "big show" was the presentation of the prizes by King Albert of Belgium and the crown prince. These prizes consisted of firsts, seconds, thirds, along with 20 special challenge trophies for the various competitions. Brand Whitlock, the American ambassador, was in the stand with King Albert. There was a lot of ceremony with military parade of flags and choral singing. The king personally presented the medals to the winners of the first places. Crown Prince Leopold gave out the awards to the seconds and the young Prince Charles gave the medals to the thirds. The Americans gave King Albert a cheer such as royalty never got, it being the American yell, ending with "Albert!"

Two years later came a trip around the world with a six months' stopover in China, where Aileen was sent to a French convent. Later the Riggins returned to America, via Europe, so that by the time Aileen was ten she had circled the globe.

It was only two years ago that she began swimming in earnest and she has been diving only about a year. She joined the Women's Swimming association and under the guidance of L. deB. Handley, who has turned out such champions as Ethelda Bleibtrey, Charlotte Boyle and Claire Galligan of the Women's S. A., she began to perfect her stroke.

"I swam a three-mile Marathon once, but never again," said Aileen. "I prefer shorter distances, for long swims kill your speed. However, I like diving better than swimming and I'm so glad to represent America as a fancy diver."

"I think my dancing has given me poise and form in diving," she said with a suddenly serious grown-up air. "You see, I studied at the Metropolitan Ballet school for a year and have danced at the opera there. Dancing helps to develop the muscles, but swimming, after all, as everybody says, is the best all around exercise."

"We have to do four compulsory dives at Antwerp—the French or Swan, Jack-knife, Back, and Back Jack-knife—and four optional dives. I've chosen the Front Half Twist, Front One and a Half Twist, and French Jack-knife with a Half Twist and a Full Twist."

"When you begin to learn to dive, the first thing to do is simply fall off a dock holding your knees, so you don't hit the water with your stomach. Then you gradually straighten up, and finally you try the French dive, then a running dive, and then you're ready for the other kinds. Of course the full twist is the most difficult, or maybe the back two and a half somersault. I can't tell you how they're done, but I'd love to show you." Again her little white teeth flashed into view as she smiled.

The swimming world is likely to see more of Aileen Riggins. For, mind you, she's as remarkable for her swimming as for her diving. Her swimming form is said to be nearly perfect; she goes through the water smoothly and gracefully, even when going at top speed. She has been called an "aquatic marvel" by the experts. Whatever that may mean, Aileen Riggins is a remarkable swimmer and diver already at the age of fourteen.

Well-Known Remedies.
Mr. B. was ill with a cold, and the doctor who was summoned prescribed old-fashioned remedies, "calomel and quinine internally and antiphotigistine to be applied externally."

It proved very effective and the malig boasted of his quick recovery to one of the neighbors. "And Mrs. B. didn't do hardly anything to cure him," she added, "She gave him quinine and calomus and covered his chest with alabastine."

Correct.
A few days ago the public library gave an examination to the young women who wished to enter a library class. Among the questions concerning current events was, "Who is Babe Ruth?" One of the girls exclaimed, "Well, at least I know the answer to that one," and wrote, "Babe Ruth is a race horse."—Indianapolis News.

The Fact.

Origin of Dollar Mark.
Some claim that it is a modification of the English symbol (£) for the pound. Another explanation is that it came from the letters U. S. written one over the other. Yet another theory is that the two upright marks represent two pillars of brass before the temple of Solomon, which early appeared on our coins and became intertwined with a scroll.

Fur Mantle in Form of Cape

Judging by the fur wraps prepared for this winter, the good, old-fashioned fur coat has passed into the discard. To be really smart, observes a Paris fashion correspondent, our fur mantle must be in the form of a cape or closely resemble a dress or, if a coat at all, decidedly of the wrap type. The fitted sleeve is seldom seen in the latter. When there is a sleeve it is cut as part of the garment, somewhat on the raglan style.

Some of the very newest fur garments for 1920-21 are being made in what is known in Paris as the robe manteau style; that is, the coat is almost in the form of a dress. The leading furriers have taken this tip, as it were, from the big dressmakers of Paris, who are having remarkable success with these coat dresses.

From fur to organdie is a far cry, but in fashion vagaries the whole gamut is often sounded, and so the robe manteau is found in organdie and in price-less fur. The last word in summer frocks, worn at the Trouville-Deauville races, was the robe manteau in organdie, and the first fur novelty wrap for winter is in the robe manteau style.

A charming wrap of this character is developed in moleskins as thin and fine as satin, with trimming bands of over the other. These do not ripple, but wrap or drape gracefully about the wearer.

All of the new mantles have a very flat hanging back, which gives a square appearance to the figure, although the front often crosses in a diagonal line and wraps the figure snugly. This is just the difference between the coats of last winter and those of 1919-1921—that indefinable something which makes all the difference between being in the fashion or out of fashion.

Caracul is a fur well suited to these square hanging designs. A lovely new wrap of natural caracul made in this way has a deep collar and a straight band of fur around the bottom to form a trimming. There are no sleeves, the arms coming through slits at the sides. At the armholes the points of the squares are turned back and buttoned in envelope effect.

Considerable care was expended on the lining of this wrap, which is of beautiful brown and yellow brocaded silk, with part of the brocaded design embroidered in yellow threads. The buttons were selected with quite as much attention as was given to the lining—an example of the thought given to every detail in the clothes of today. They are of gray galalith to blend with the soft coloring of the fur, and are pear-shaped, carved in beautiful design.

Another gray and caracul wrap, being shown among the newest models, is made in the form of a straight cape, but has bands of the fur placed around the waistline to give the effect of two tiers. There is a deep hanging kolinsky collar which really forms a little cape in itself.

Hudson Seal Is Favored.

Hudson seal is as popular as ever for general wear. There is much to recommend it. It is durable and inexpensive in comparison with many of the other furs as well as becoming.

A smartly tailored fur coat developed in Hudson seal has a big cord girdle, which pinches it in tightly at the waistline. The cuff bands, shoulder collar and skirt hem show the fur dark Hudson bay mink. There is a mink to match as beautifully tailored as if it were of cloth.

Tightly-girdled coat of Hudson seal with cape collar and cuff bands of kolinsky.

Another fur coat, in the form of a dress, is of moleskin, worked in bands which show horizontal, bias and chevron lines. The quaint, snug shoulder cape is new in its slanting lines.

Development in Fur.

One of the most interesting developments in fashions is seen in the fur coat of the present day. A few years ago designers would not have thought of draping furs in the same way that they would chiffon. Very many of the new fur wraps of the mantle type show almost priceless pelts arranged in the form of draped capes. Following the great popularity of silk and serge mantles during the early autumn season, it is to be expected that furs made in these styles will be equally popular. Both capes and coats are made in tiers, one falling

Wrap Like Traveling Coat

A wrap created by one of our American designers is of eastern mink in straight cape effect, with two bands of the fur set below the collar to give the effect of three capes graduating in size, the collar forming the first. The skins are arranged horizontally on either side of the front and around the collar to make a trimming band. There are no sleeves, merely slits through which the arms pass. It is lined with a beautiful black and gold brocaded silk.

Another mink wrap, in one-piece cape effect, has the skins placed to give the effect of stripes running around both in the collar and body portion. Trimming bands of the fur are on either side of the front and hang in wide loops, which are arranged at the waistline so that they may be used as a muff.

Like an old-time English traveling coat, with little shoulder capes forming the sleeves, is another mink wrap. The body is in cape form, with a ten-inch trimming border achieved by placing the skins diagonally. On this model the collar is really small, not more than six inches wide in the back and becoming gradually narrower in the front until it disappears at the waistline.

Among the evening wraps are some new and beautiful models of ermine. A particularly interesting one shows a straight cape of the fur hanging almost to the waistline in the form of a deep yoke, with a choker collar.

Little Girl's Skirt.

The little girl is getting her innings in the very latest mode of plaided skirts, and to the limit of being allowed to compete with big sister in the glory of big plaids. The little girl's big-plaid skirt is a surprise. It looks very demure in close little plaidings, a mere criss-crossing of colorings—and behold! the little girl does a bit of a hop, and that skirt flares into an ensemble of startling plaids that wouldn't be startling at all if big sister or mother had flattered the revelation. This is one of the caprices in little girl's clothes this season.

If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast the jewel lies,
And they are fools who roam;
This world has nothing to bestow;
From our own selves our bliss must flow,
And that dear hut—our home.
—Nathaniel Cotton.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

A good dish for a busy day, when a good, substantial meal is needed, is:

Irish Stew on Casserole.—Have two pounds of chops from the best end of a neck of mutton, trimmed of all fat. Have pared and sliced two quarts of potatoes and six onions. Put a layer of potatoes and onions in the bottom of the casserole, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place the meat above the vegetables, seasoning well, then a layer of vegetables as before. Pour boiling water or broth to come nearly to the top of the last layer. Cover and cook gently in a moderate oven for three hours.

Baked Sweet Potatoes and Bacon.—Scrub potatoes or yams well and put into the oven to bake. When nearly done, remove from the oven and carefully remove the skin. With two wooden toothpicks fasten a slice of bacon around each; set them into the oven in a baking dish and bake until the bacon is cooked. Serve at once.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.—Chop five or six cold boiled potatoes fine, add a half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of pepper. Have ready one-third of a cupful of fat, tried out of salt pork, hot in an iron frying pan. Put in the potatoes and stir while they become hot, then spread evenly over the pan, cover and let stand until brown on the bottom; with a spatula carefully fold over the other half and turn onto a hot platter. Garnish with parsley.

Banana Fluff.—Peel three bananas and cover them with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one of grapefruit juice; cover and place on ice. After an hour mash them and beat well, adding one-half cupful of powdered sugar and the unbeaten whites of three eggs, one at a time. When light add a teaspoonful or two of vanilla and serve in glasses with one-third fresh fruit (or canned fruit) dusted with minced pistachio nuts or candied mint leaves.

The most selfish man in the world is the most unselfish with his own sorrows. He does not leave a single misery of his untold to you or unsuffered by you. He gives you all of them. The world becomes a syndicate formed to take stock in his private cares, worries and trials.—Jordan.

SOMETHING TO EAT.

A sandwich is a dainty appetizer which is always welcome; here are two or three worth remembering:

Cucumber Sandwiches.—Cut rounds from any variety of bread; spread with butter and cover until ready to serve. Pare, slice and cover with cold water the cucumbers to be used. Have ready French dressing made with a little scraped onion and finely-chopped parsley. Dry the cucumbers on a cloth, stir in the dressing and set a slice between two pieces of prepared bread. Garnish with parsley and serve at once. Thin slices of ripe tomato made good sandwich filling, treating the same as the cucumbers.

Milwaukee Sandwich.—For each sandwich toast two slices of white bread, and one of rye. Set one slice of toast on heart leaves of lettuce. On this set four broiled or fried oysters; cover with the slice of rye bread and on this lay two thin slices of the breast of chicken, two crisp slices of bacon and horseradish sauce; cover with the last piece of toast and arrange on this sliced radishes and sweet pickles. Remove the skin from a small tomato, cut out the hard center and fill with sauce tartare; arrange on a lettuce leaf beside the sandwich.

Pineapple Tapioca Sponge.—Beat one pint of grated pineapple in a double boiler; add half a cupful of boiling water, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; then stir in one-half cupful of quick-cooking tapioca. Stir occasionally and cook 20 minutes, or until the tapioca is clear; add half a cupful of sugar and the juice of half a lemon. Then fold in the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Serve hot with top milk and sugar.

Little Girl's Skirt.—The little girl is getting her innings in the very latest mode of plaided skirts, and to the limit of being allowed to compete with big sister in the glory of big plaids. The little girl's big-plaid skirt is a surprise. It looks very demure in close little plaidings, a mere criss-crossing of colorings—and behold! the little girl does a bit of a hop, and that skirt flares into an ensemble of startling plaids that wouldn't be startling at all if big sister or mother had flattered the revelation. This is one of the caprices in little girl's clothes this season.

THE BAD BEAR.

"Why did you do it?" asked Billy, the brown bear.

"Because I thought I would have some fun," said Mollie, the black bear. "Well, if you had fun, you might have been more sociable when you got back again. You've been having a fine sleep ever since."

"After such excitement and such adventures," said Mollie, "I needed a sleep."

"Are you going to tell me of your adventures now?" asked Billy.

"Yes, I will," growled Mollie, "for they are really worth telling."

"It wasn't particularly grateful of you to go out of your cage when your keeper was getting your dinner ready, was it?"

"My dear Billy," said Mollie, "I was not paying any attention to the keeper. I thought to myself:

"When I come back I will have a good dinner awaiting me and I may be very hungry." So I started forth."

"Oh, it was such a thrilling thing to do," said Billy. "I am really very jealous of you for having gotten out. And did you like the park?"

"It's a nice park and it has a few nice trees," said Mollie, "but people are very queer. Yes, they're very queer, indeed."

"Tell me all about them—and everything," said Billy.

"You see I got out of my yard when the keeper was fixing my dinner in my small house, or at the entrance to my house. I thought to myself:

"Now, I'll have some adventures. I've been in this park for a number of years, you know," Mollie continued, "and I've never really had any adventures before. So I went forth as I have said, or if I haven't said it, I have meant to say it."

"I thought it would be nice and kind and sociable of me if I made a little visit on some of the people I saw sitting on the benches. I thought to myself that many a time they came to see me at the zoo and that now I had a chance to return their visits."

"I've seen them smile at me when I've been in my yard many a time. But did they smile at me when I returned the calls?"

"Not a bit of it; they were as rude as could be. I saw a handsome man and a beautiful lady and a little girl sitting on a bench. So I went up to them and said: 'Hello, how do you come?' I thought I would give them a good surprise."

"I did surprise them but I didn't give them much pleasure, for alas and alas, they screamed in horror as they saw me."

"But one can't account for the lack of friendship of some folks."

"I wandered on and seeing a baby carriage I thought I'd look at the baby to see what sort of a child it was going to be."

No "wailing winds" with mournful call

Wail, "saddest of the year,"

The "dead and withered leaves" now fall—

That new leaves may appear.

Protected by our great Sierras,

GOODBYE

With this issue of the News the writer climbs down off the tripod and turns the management of the paper over to Mr. Leo Eldridge Sharp, who has made Sierra Madre his home for a year while he was employed by the government checking up manufacturers' reports in this territory. Mr. Sharp is an experienced newspaper man, energetic and capable, a natural home town booster, and will give Sierra Madre a much better paper than the writer has been able to do.

I want to thank the business men for their loyal support to the paper, and ask a continuance of the same to my successor.

Regarding my future plans, the following clipping from the Long Beach Press will explain:

"Announcement was made today of the establishment of a real estate partnership by Milo M. Whiting, pioneer realty operator of Long Beach, and his brother, J. Fred Whiting. The firm has opened offices at 240 East First street and will engage in a general real estate and investment business."

"Milo M. Whiting, senior member of the firm, came to Long Beach in 1900 before the Pacific Electric company operated trains to this city. He is widely known in real estate circles."

"J. Fred Whiting has resided at Sierra Madre for the past two years. Previous to coming to California Mr. Whiting was manager of the Mutual Advertising Agency of Kansas City, advertising manager of the Kansas City Journal, and for five years was traveling efficiency man of the Western Newspaper Union."

Mrs. Whiting and I like Sierra Madre better than any other place on earth and hope to return and make our home here at some future date.

J. FRED WHITING.

DINNER PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Rhodes entertained a number of friends with dinner on Thanksgiving day. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with holly and poinsettias, and guests included Miss Della Green and Elwood Land of Los Angeles, Miss Frances Ralston of Pasadena, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Bassett, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brooks of Sierra Madre.

MARRIED

Miss Margaret E. Decker was married to Mr. Arthur Johnson, Sr., at the home of Mr. Johnson, 49 Suffolk avenue, on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. Thompson in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

The bride was gown in pink crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with pink and white carnations and Cecil Bruner roses with ferns. Light refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will remain in Sierra Madre for the present but expect to take a trip later.

OLD CLOTHES DAY

Wednesday was old clothes day at Pasadena High school in celebration of the football game at Long Beach Thanksgiving day. Most of the day was spent in collecting fire wood for the mammoth bonfire.

Old Clothes Day is an annual event. It was originated about seven years ago when the athletic field at the completion of the new buildings was an unsightly place, and the principal called for volunteers to clean up the field.

The response was most enthusiastic. The boys appeared in their old work clothes and the field was cleaned. Each year the anniversary of this event has been observed.

Many queer costumes, worn by Sierra Madre students, were seen on the cars, and caused much merriment.

CHILDREN, BRING YOUR GIFTS

Children, do you know there are other children in Sierra Madre that will not have any Christmas presents unless you give them some of yours?

You have playthings that you are tired of and do not use any more. Wouldn't you like to make some other child happy by giving something to it for a Christmas present? Of course you would.

Well, then, we'll tell you how it is to be managed. Bring the toys and playthings that you can spare to the News office and the relief society will ask City Nurse Young to play Santa Claus, because she knows just where each present will fit the best, and on the day before Christmas she will distribute your presents to children who, otherwise, would probably not get any.

Won't that be fun to make them happy? And let me tell you something, you will be as happy in giving as they will be in receiving.

We will put all the presents you bring for them in the News' show window, keep a careful list of all that bring them and just before Christmas will publish the names of those who gave the toys, dolls, books and other playthings.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

By Mrs. Palmer Rhodes.

On Monday afternoon, Nov. 22, the Sierra Madre Woman's club held an exhibition of paintings by members of the California Art club, paintings owned by members of the Woman's club, and a group of thirty landscapes by Mrs. Fraser of Monrovia, whose glimpses of mountain and valley were like dark opals in color, with the occasional gleam of sycamore trunks, a path or a cloud striking across their blue and green depths.

Mrs. Galloway Duncan's portrait of Mrs. Rogen, formerly exhibited at the Royal Academy in London, was a graciously dominating figure in the exhibit. The subject seems to retire into the atmosphere of a room seen far behind the frame, as Whistler painted. The color is dark but not somber. Character in figure and face impresses one more than costume and accessories, beautiful as these are.

"Andrew Galloway," by the same artist portrays the rugged and keenly intelligent face of an inventor in Scotland. "Channel Islands at Guernsey" is a remarkable composition of light and shadow, sunlit cliffs and green waters. Many other landscapes are shown by this versatile painter.

John Hubbard Rich, one of the foremost portrait painters of the Southwest, is represented by charming figure compositions in his usual sunlit coloring, intimate bits of genre.

"Elizabeth," one of Mrs. Marjorie Conner Murphy's exquisite transcripts of childhood in color. The child seems absorbed in a thought world of her own. Helen Balfour sends two finely characterized Southern California views. Benjamin Brown a poetical rendition of "The Bells of Capistrano," in full sunlight, over walls and sun-tipped roofs, contrasting with a shadowed court. Jean Mannheim, whose portrait of John Burroughs has won great distinction, sends "Storm Clouds," a vigorous piece of painting. Mrs. Katherine Leighton, whose art training was received in Boston, is represented by two canvases, one a lighted vista, seen through an avenue of eucalyptus trees, another a pond surrounded by dark blue green trees, very crisp and spontaneous in treatment.

Miss Donna Schuster, already well known in Sierra Madre, sends a sunset view from her old painting ground at Gloucester, Mass. Dana Bartlett, secretary of the California Art club, sends two of his idyllic landscapes. Paul Lawritz contributes several Alaskan studies, Karl Yens, Susie Dando, Mr. and Mrs. Edouard Vyskal send characteristic canvases. Also Jack Wilkinson Smith, Roscoe Schrader and Nakanisi, a Japanese member of this progressive and influential body of artists, who every year send out their more intimate, small canvases to travel from city to city, that art shall be better known and enjoyed.

A member of this club, resident in Sierra Madre, Ella Shepard Bush, is represented by a group of twenty-two miniatures, many of which have been seen in exhibitions in New York, Philadelphia and in the exposition at San Francisco. Four new miniatures were shown, among them a portrait of the beloved founder of the club, Mrs. J. A. Osgood, who is represented as winner of her favorite game of chess. "A Toccata of Galuppi's" rich in color, represents a modern woman against a background of Venetian rug—and accessories—and a sixteenth century Clavichord; two oil paintings hang above the group of miniatures, one being the portrait of Leo Elridge Sharp—a forcefully painted canvas, in a carefully organized color scheme.

Miss Graham loaned "the Wave," by Mrs. Galloway Duncan, and Mrs. George F. Ferris a copy of Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Strawberry Girl," to the exhibition.

The stage of the club house itself formed a picture, and was on the theme of "Harvest Home," with its serried ranks of corn sheaves, and its golden pumpkins. This arrangement and that of the entire exhibit was the work of Mrs. Milton Steinberger, whose enterprise and skill made the exhibition so beautiful and successful.

As chairman of the program committee, Mrs. Steinberger introduced the speakers of the afternoon, Mrs. Katherine Leighton, who gave a most charming and interesting account of the progress of art study, and the growth of modern painting. Then Ella T. Stork read a paper by Bush on "Miniature Painting," its origin on illuminated manuscripts in the Middle Ages, up to the Colonial Period, when it was supplanted by photography; then period of its revival in the latter part of the 19th century, and its present growth and blossoming to the present day.

Mrs. Duncan spoke on art most interestingly from the experience of one who has lived in it with intensity and sincerity. The club members and their friends enjoyed tea served in the club's newly decorated dining room. They were invited to bring their husbands to view the exhibition in the evening, and the pictures were again shown on Tuesday, Nov. 23, many school children availing themselves of this opportunity to see work by representative California painters.

The Drama section of the club, under the direction of Miss Florence McAfee, will meet on Thursday, December 2, at the club house from 2 to 4.

The Art section, under the direction of Miss Helen Sadler, will meet on the following Thursday, Dec. 9, from 2 o'clock to 4.

On Friday evening, Nov. 26, the usual club dance will be given. Dance lovers are reminded of this good time in store for them.

America was in close and friendly touch with Turkey and Greece yesterday.

Many auto race enthusiasts who did not attend the contest at Los Angeles yesterday are congratulating themselves today for having missed witnessing a tragedy.

"KNIFE WORK."

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $100,000. But he looks like a hobo. Then he meets a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over. He eliminates the offending man. Being what he is and also girl-shy, he does not take advantage of his opportunity. But he just has to find out that she is Dolores Ruy. In Denver he is offered a $25,000-a-year job by a capitalist friend, Edward J. Jerome. He receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. Thereupon he turns down the big job and decides to answer the call of friendship and adventure to Soberano. Jerome goes with John to the depot. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John lifts his hat, but gets the cut direct from the girl, who does not recognize him. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl, offering her $50,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of ninety days. The girl accepts. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura, Soberano, where Geary, on his uppers, is eating his heart out looking for a cablegram from his old partner. He has existed for two months on credit extended by Mother Jenks, keeper of a respectable hotel. Dolores cables Henrietta Wilkins (Mother Jenks) that she is on her way to visit her. Mother Jenks breaks down and tells her story. She has been educating Dolores, who is the daughter of former President Ruy of Soberano, deposed and executed by President Carrero. Mother Jenks doesn't want Dolores to find out she is no longer respectable. So she and Billy plan for him to meet the steamer and to turn the girl back. Billy bungles his job and Dolores lands and salutes Mother Jenks as "Mother." Billy promptly falls in love with Dolores. Webster in New Orleans secures a stateroom on La Estrellita by buying a ticket for a mythical valet.

"Be there at a quarter after two, Mr. Webster, and you will hear from me promptly on the minute," the clerk assured him; whereupon Webster paid for one berth and departed for his hotel with a feeling that the clerk's report would be favorable.

True to his promise, at precisely a quarter after two, the ticket clerk telephoned Webster at his hotel that the berth in No. 34 had been canceled and the entire stateroom was now at his disposal.

"If you will be good enough to give me the name of your valet," he concluded, "I will fill in both names on my passenger manifest and send the tickets to your hotel by messenger immediately. You can then sign the tickets—I have already signed them as witness—and pay the messenger."

"Well, I haven't engaged that valet as yet," Webster began.

"What's the odds? He's going to miss the boat, anyhow. All I require is a name."

"That ought to be a simple request to comply with. Let me see!"

"I read a book once, Mr. Webster, and the valet in that book was called Andrew Bowers."

"Bowers is a fine old English name. Let us seek no further. Andrew Bowers it is."

"Thank you. All you have to do then is to remember to sign the name, Andrew Bowers, to one ticket. Don't forget your valet's name now, and call everything up," and the clerk hung up, laughing.

Half an hour later a boy from the steamship office arrived with the tickets, collected for them, and departed, leaving John Stuart Webster singularly pleased with himself and at peace with the entire world.

A "large" dinner at Antoine's that night (Webster had heard of Antoine's dinners, both large and small and was resolved not to leave New Orleans until he had visited the famous restaurant), and a stroll through the picturesque old French quarter and along the levee next day, helped to render his enforced stay in New Orleans delightful, interesting, and instructive. For Sunday he planned an early morning visit to the old French market, around which still lingers much of the picturesque charm and colorful romance of a day that is done—that echo of yesterday, as it were, which has left New Orleans an individuality as distinct as that which the olden, golden, godless days have left upon San Francisco.

He rose before six o'clock, therefore; found a taxi, with the driver sound asleep inside, at the curb in front of the hotel; gave the latter his instructions, and climbed in.

Opposite Jackson Square the cloying sweetness of palmetto, palm, and fig burdened the air. Above the rumble of the taxi he could hear the distant babel of voices in the French market across the square, so he halted the taxicab, alighted, and handed the driver a bill.

"I want to explore this square," he said. He had recognized it by the heroic statue of General Jackson peering through the trees. "The walk through the square to the market, and you may proceed to the market and meet me there. Later we will return to the hotel."

A Creole girl—starry-eyed, beautiful, rich with the glorious coloring of her race—passed him bound for the cathedral across the square, as Webster thought, for she carried a large prayer book on her arm. His glance followed the girl down the walk.

Presently she halted. A young man rose from a bench where he evidently had been waiting for her, and bowed low, his hat clasped to his breast, as only a Frenchman or a Spanish grandee can bow. Webster saw the Creole girl turn to him with a little gesture of pleasure. She extended her hand and the young man kissed it with old-fashioned courtesy.

John Stuart Webster with reverent and wistful eyes watched their meeting.

"Forty years old," he thought, "and I haven't spoken to a dozen women that caused me a second thought, or who weren't postmistresses or biscuit shooters! Forty years old and I've never been in love! Springtime down that little path and Indian summer in my old fool heart. Why, I ought to be arrested for failure to live!"

The lovers were walking slowly, arm in arm, along the path by which the girl had come, so with a courtesy and gentleness that were innate in him, Webster stepped out of sight behind the statue of Old Hickory; for he did not desire, by his mere presence, to intrude a discordant note in the perfect harmony of those two human hearts. He knew they desired that sylvan path to themselves; that evidently they had sought their early morning tryst in the knowledge that the square was likely to be deserted at this hour.

The young man was speaking as they passed; his voice was rich, pleasant, vibrant with the earnestness of what he had to say: with a pretty little silver mounted walking stick he slashed at spears of grass alongside the path; the girl was crying a little. Neither of them had seen him, so he entered a path that led from them at right angles.

He had proceeded but a few feet along this trail when, through a break in the shrubbery ahead of him, he saw two men. Brief as was his glimpse of them, Webster instantly recognized the two Central Americans he had seen in the steamship ticket office two days previous.

They were not walking as walk two men abroad at this hour for a constitutional. Neither did they walk as walk men churchward bound. A slight, skulking air marked their progress, and caused Webster to wonder idly what they were stalking.

He turned into the path down which the two men had passed, not with the slightest idea of shadowing them, but because his destination lay in that direction.

Both men had forsaken the graveled path and were walking on the soft velvet of blue grass lawn that fringed it! "Perhaps I'd better deaden my hoof beats also," John Stuart Webster soliloquized, and followed sulk immediately.

He had scarcely done so when the man ahead of him paused abruptly. Webster did likewise, and responding—subconsciously, perhaps, to the remembrance of the menace in the glance of the man with the puckered eye—he stepped out of sight behind a broad oak tree. Through the trees and shrubbery he could still see the lovers, who had halted and evidently were about to part.

Webster saw the young man glance warily about; then, apparently satisfied there was none to spy upon them, he drew the girl gently toward him. She clung to him for nearly a minute, sobbing; then he raised her face tenderly, kissed her, pressed her from him, and walked swiftly away without looking back.

It was a sweet and rather touching little tableau; to John Stuart Webster, imaginative and possessed of a romantic streak in his nature, it was more than a tableau. It was a moving picture!

"I suppose her old man objects to the young fellow," he muttered to himself sympathetically, "and he can't come near the house. They've met here for the fond farewell, and now the young fellow's going out West to make his fortune, so he can come back and claim the girl. Huh! If he wants her, why the devil doesn't he take her? Hello! By Judas priest! Now I know what those two parakeets are up to. One of them is the father of that girl. They've been spying on the lovers, and now they're going to corner the young fellow and shingle him for his nerve."

The girl had stood for a moment, gazing after her companion, before she turned with her handkerchief to her eyes, and continued on her way to the cathedral. Webster heard her sobbing as she stumbled blindly by, and he was distressed about her, for all the world loves a lover and John Stuart Webster was no exception to this universal rule.

"By George, this is pretty tough," he reflected. "That young fellow treated that girl with as much gentleness and courtesy as any gentleman should, and I'm for him and against this idea of corporal punishment. Don't you worry, little, my dear. I'm going to horn into this game myself if it goes too far."

The two dusky skulkers ahead of him, having come to another cross-path, turned into it and came out on the main path in the rear of the young man. Webster noticed that the pair were still walking on the grass. He padded gently along behind them.

The four were now rapidly approaching the old French market, and the steadily rising babel of voices speaking in French, Italian, Spanish, Creole patois and Choctaw, was sufficient to have drowned the slight noise of the pursuit, even had the young man's mind not been upon other things, and the interest of the two Central Americans centered upon their quarry, to the exclusion of any thought of possible interruption.

Webster felt instinctively that the two men would rush and make a concerted attack from the rear. He smiled.

"I'll just fool you two hombres a whole lot," he thought, and stooping, picked up a small stone. On the instant the two men, having approached within thirty feet of their quarry, made a rush for him.

Their charge was swift, but though it was, the little stone which John Stuart Webster hurled was swifter. It struck the young man fairly between the shoulderblades with a force sufficient to bring him out of his sentimental reverie with a jerk, as it were. He whirled, saw the danger that threatened him, and—sprang to meet it.

"Bravo!" yelled Webster, and ran to his aid, for he had seen now that it was to be knife work. Tragedy instead of melodrama.

The man with the puckered eye closed in with such eagerness it was apparent to Webster that here was work to his liking. The young man raised his light cane, but Pucker-eye did not hesitate. He merely threw up his left forearm to meet the expected blow aimed at his head, lunged forward and slashed viciously at the young man's abdomen. The latter drew back a step, doubled like a jack-knife, and brought his cane down viciously across the knuckles of his assailant's right hand.

"So it is thou, son of a pig," he called pleasantly in Spanish. "I fooled you that time, didn't I?" he added in English. "Thought I would aim for your head, didn't you?"

The blow temporarily paralyzed the assassin's hand; he dropped the knife, and as he stooped to recover it with his left hand, the young man, before retreating from Pop-eye, kicked Pucker-eye in the face and quite upset him.

"Stop it!" shouted Webster.

Pop-eye turned his head at the outcry. The man he was attacking fell into the position of a swordsman en garde, and thrust viciously with the ferrule at the face of the pop-eyed man, who, disregarding Webster's approach, seized the cane in his left hand and with a quick, powerful tug actually drew his victim toward him a foot before the latter let go the stick.

Before he could give ground again Pop-eye was upon him. He grasped the young man by the latter's left arm and held him, while he drew back for the awful disemboweling stroke. As his long arm sped forward the hook of John Stuart Webster's heavy cane descended upon that flexed arm in the crook of the elbow, snagging it cleverly.

The knife never reached its destination!

"You would, would you?" said Webster reproachfully, and jerked the fellow violently around. The man he had rescued promptly struck Pop-eye a terrible blow in the face with his left hand and broke loose from the grip that had so nearly been his undoing; then Webster tapped the assassin a meditative tap or two on the top of his sinful head for good measure and to awaken in him some sense of the impropriety and futility of resistance, after which Webster turned to discuss a similar question of ethics with Pucker-eye.

The scar-checked man was on his knees, groping groggily for his knife, for he had received a severe kick under the chin, and for the nonce was far from dangerous. Stooping, Webster picked up the knife; then with knife and cane grasped in his left hand he seized Pucker-eye by the nape with his right and jerked him to his feet. The assassin stood glowering at him in a perfect frenzy of brutish, inarticulate fury.

"Take the knife away from the other fellow before he gets active again," Webster called over his shoulder. "I'll manage this rascal. We'll march them over to the market and turn them over to the police." He spoke in Spanish.

"Thanks, ever so much, for my life," the young man answered lightly, and in English, "but where I come from it is not the fashion to settle these arguments in a court of law. To call an officer is considered unclublike; to shoot a prisoner in this country is considered murder, and consequently I have but one alternative and I advise you, my good friend, to have a little of the same. I'm going to run like the devil."

And he did. He was in full flight before Webster could glance around, and in an instant he was lost to sight among the trees.

"That advice sounds eminently fair and reasonable," Webster yelled after him, and was about to follow when he observed that the young man had abandoned his pretty little silver-chased walking stick.

"That's too nice a little stick to leave to these brigands," he thought, and forthwith possessed himself of it and the pop-eyed man's knife, after which he turned upon the order of his going but went, departing at top speed.

The young man he had saved from being butchered was right. An entangling alliance with the police was, decidedly, not to John Stuart Webster's liking, for should he unfortunately, form such an alliance, he would be haled into court as a witness and perhaps miss the steamer to San Buenaventura.

He had planned to spend an hour in the market, drink a cup of cafe noir, smoke a cigarette, and return to his hotel in time for a leisurely breakfast, but his recent bout with grim reality had blunted the edge of romance. He ordered his driver to take him back to the hotel, sprang inside and congratulated himself on his lucky escape.

CHAPTER VIII.

Webster's trunk went aboard the steamer early the following morning, and at noon he entered a taxi with his hand baggage and was driven to the levee where La Estrellita lay tugging gently at her mooring lines. Owing to the congestion of freight and traffic the chauffeur stopped his cab a little distance from the gangplank, where Webster discharged him with a liberal tip.

The latter, however, swung his passenger's bag and suitcase to the ground, picked them up and started for the gangplank.

"Never mind my baggage, lad," Webster called after him. "One of the deck boys will care for it."

The chauffeur turned. "You've been generous with me, sir," he answered, "so I think I had better carry your baggage aboard. If you permit a deck boy to handle it, you merely have to give another tip, and that would be sheer wanton waste. Why shouldn't I earn the one you gave me?"

"I hadn't figured it out that way, son, so here's another half dollar for being the only existing specimen of your species in captivity. My stateroom is No. 34, upper deck, port side," Webster answered, smiling. The man took the tip eagerly and hurried toward the gangplank; the quartermaster on duty shouldered a way for him and he darted aboard.

Webster followed leisurely. At the gangplank the purser's clerk halted him, examined his tickets and punched them.

"Where is the other man?" he asked.

"You have two tickets here."

"Oh, that blamed valet of mine," Webster answered, and glanced around as if in search of that mythical functionary. "It would be like the stupid fellow to miss the boat," he added.

"When he comes—"

Webster ceased speaking abruptly. He was looking straight into the malevolent orbs of Pucker-eye, who was standing just behind the clerk at the foot of the gangplank.

"I wonder if Pop-eye's around, also," Webster thought, and he faced about. Pop-eye was standing in back of him, leaning over the railing of the gangway.

"Which is the valet?" the purser's clerk asked, scanning the names on the tickets.

"Andrew Bowers."

"All right, Mr. Webster," the other answered, with that genial camaraderie that seems inseparable from all of his calling. "When Andrew comes I'll send him aboard."

He started to pass the tickets back to Webster, but a detaining hand rested on his arm, while a dark thumb and forefinger lifted the trailing strips of tickets. Pucker-eye was examining them also.

The purser's clerk drove his elbow backward violently into Pucker-eye's midriff and shook him off roughly.

"What do you mean, you black-and-tan hound?" he demanded. "Since when did you begin to O. K. my work?"

Pucker-eye made no reply to this stern reproof. He accepted the elbow with equanimity and faced Webster with an evil smile that indicated mutual recognition.

"Bueno," he said. "The senior hee sails on La Estrellita for San Buenaventura, no?"

"So you came nosing around to see about it, eh? Doing a little plain gumshoe work, I see."

Pucker-eye bowed. By the simple exercise of courage and bad manners he had looked at John Stuart Webster's ticket and was now familiar with his name and destination.

Webster glowered darkly at Pucker-eye and said:

"Well, you scoundrelly cutthroat, what are you going to do about it? Try a little of your knife work on me, I suppose?"

The fellow grinned—the kind of grin that is composed of equal parts of ferocity and knowledge of superior strength. That grin did more to disconcert Webster than the knowledge that he had earned for himself two bloodthirsty and implacable enemies, for Pucker-eye was the first of his breed that Webster had ever seen smile under insult. That cool smile infuriated him.

Pucker-eye took out a cigarette case, selected a cigarette and presented the case to Webster. His bad manners in selecting his own cigarette first was deliberate, as Webster knew. It was the Latin-American's method of showing his contempt.

"We shall meet again, Meester Webster," he said. "May I offer a cigarette for the—what you Americans call—the key-sake? No?" He smiled brightly and closed his puckered eye in a knowing wink.

Webster took his tickets from the purser, folded them, placed them in his pocket and for a few seconds regarded Pucker-eye contemptuously.

"When we meet again, you scunt," he retorted quietly, "you shall have no difficulty in remembering me. You may keep your cigarette."

His long, powerful right arm shot out; like a forceps his thumb and forefinger closed over Pucker-eye's rather flat nose; he squeezed, and with a shrill scream of agony Pucker-eye went to his knees.

Still holding the wretch by his proboscis, Webster turned quickly in order that his face might be toward Pop-eye.

"Pop-eye," he said, "if you take a hand in this, I'll twist your nose, too, and afterward I'll throw you in the river."

He turned to Pucker-eye. "Up, thou curious little one," he said in Spanish, and jerked the unhappy rascal to his feet. The latter clawed ineffectually at the terrible arm which held him, until, presently discovering that the harder he struggled the harder Webster pinched his nose, he ceased his struggles and hung limply, moaning with pain and rage in the grip of the American.

"Good!" Webster announced, slackening his grip a little. With his left hand he deftly extracted a hair from each flank of the screaming little scoundrel's scant mustache and held them before the latter's tear-filled eyes.

"My friend," he said gently, "mark how the gringo gives his little dark brother a lesson in deportment. Behold, if I have given thee a souvenir of our meeting, I also have taken one. By this pinched and throbbing nose shall I be remembered when I am gone; by these hairs from thy rat's mustache shall I remember thee. Go, and thrust not that nose into a gringo's business again. It is unsafe."

"I am known as Mr. Andrew Bowers, valet de chambre to that prince of gentlemen, Mr. John S. Webster."

IMPROVED ROADS

ENTRANCE ROADS FOR FARMS

Engineers of Bureau of Public Roads Recommend Use of Bituminous Material.

Owners of large farms and rural estates seeking a more satisfactory type of entrance roads have applied to the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture for advice regarding the application of bituminous material on main entrance and much-traveled farm lanes.

The bureau's engineers point out that such applications may be made successfully on any farm road which has already been constructed of stone, gravel, or other similar material and is in a thoroughly compacted and reasonably smooth condition. A coal-tar preparation applied cold, or an asphaltic oil, can be used, and if applied by the farm employees, the cost should not exceed 7 or 8 cents a square yard for materials. The compacted gravel or stone road should be thoroughly cleaned of dust and the bitumen applied with ordinary sprinkling pots from which the perforated nozzle has been removed and the spout carefully flattened into a symmetrical rectangular opening about one-quarter of an inch wide, so that the material may be poured in a broad, flat stream.

If a large amount of work is to be done, a specially designed pouring can may be purchased of dealers in road equipment. Care should be taken to have an even distribution, and the quantity, applied should be approximately one-half gallon to a square yard of road surface. After applying the bituminous material, clean gravel or stone chips should be spread evenly over the surface, and, if possible, rolled with a lawn or field roller. Where gravel or chips are not available, clean, coarse sand will serve as covering material. It should be spread in sufficient quantity to prevent the bituminous material from adhering to tires of passing vehicles. Attention is called to the fact that this treatment should not be made where drainage from the stables or barns will flow over it. Where mudholes are likely to form around hitching posts or at stable entrances, if a more durable pavement is desired, a section of concrete slab should be laid.

ROAD DRAG MOST BENEFICIAL

Implement Is Used Wherever Roads Are Built—Ruts Are Removed Quickly by Its Use.

If there is a call for a piece of machinery to economize the growing or handling of crops it seems to be forthcoming sooner or later. But it remained for a farmer to invent one of the simplest as well as the most beneficial of implements from the standpoint of universal comfort brought about by its use. It is used wherever men build roads, and ruts disappear after it has taken a trip over them. Measured in dollars and cents it costs only a trifle, but measured by the service it gives, it is worth millions. We refer to the road drag. Before it was invented the roads were worn down only by travel and it often took weeks to do it. The drag does it in a day.—Successful Farming.

HOW TO MANIPULATE GRADER

Remove Grass or Weeds From Shoulders or Ditches by Cutting Away With Sharp Knife.

If grass or weeds cover the shoulders or ditches remove them by cutting them away from the edge of the road with a good sharp grader blade, cutting just deep enough to remove the crown of the grass and weeds and, if possible, use them at some point on the road to prevent the side banks of hills from washing.

PROFITABLE TO CULL FLOCK

One Farmer Sold 200 Hens Out of 700 and Did Not Decrease Production of Eggs.

Too much of the feed and the time that go to a flock in which even a fourth of the hens are naturally poor layers is wasted. One farmer culled his flock of 700 hens and sold 200 hens to the butcher without decreasing the egg production. He says that the culling saved him $2 a day on feed alone and made the work much easier.

SIMPLE PLAN TO PREVENT KNOCKS

Annoyance Found in Old-Model Automobiles Caused by Too High Compression.

GASKET REMEDIES TROUBLE

Composition-Board Device Raises Engine Cylinders and Eliminates Annoyance—Less Wear and Tear Thrown on Bearings.

Owners of old-model automobiles are annoyed by a knocking which occurs under a light load. This usually sounds like a carbon or advanced spark knock, while as a matter of fact too high compression is the cause.

Perhaps the most simple method used to reduce high compression is by removing the cylinders and placing a thick gasket between the cylinders and the crank case.

How Scheme Is Worked.

Remove the cylinders. Place them on a bench, cleaning both flange and engine base thoroughly. From a sheet of flat tin make a template, which must be an exact reproduction of the base of the cylinders, except that all the openings, such as piston and bolt holes, are about one-eighth inch larger than those in the cylinders.

The template is used as a pattern for marking out and forming the cylinder-raising gasket. This method permits the gasket to be made without the necessity of placing it under the cylinder after each operation to see that it is right. A copper asbestos jacket cannot be used as a pattern, because sufficient clearance is not afforded.

Procure a sheet of red composition board one-quarter inch thick, then, using the template as a pattern, mark out the cylinder and bolt holes and the outside form on the composition board, using a gasket-cutting tool, as shown in Fig. 1, and a drill press, carefully cut out piston and bolt holes, making these one-eighth inch larger than the true diameters. With a bandsaw, or keyhole saw, cut the composition board to conform to the outside shape of the pattern.

Cylinders Are Raised.

Remove all the burled edges with a file. Place the composition board on the engine base and bolt the cylinder into place, as shown in Fig. 2. Care must be taken not to use too much shellac.

By this means the cylinders are raised, resulting in a larger compression space and, of course, less compression is created. Further, the engine will pull much better and less wear and tear will be thrown upon the engine bearings.

It will be necessary to readjust the valves after the job has been completed.—Ronald L. Prindle in Popular Science Monthly.

EVERY COMFORT OF MODERN FLAT IS PUT ON CHASSIS OF TOURING CAR

George L. Wilder, a retired cabinetmaker, has devised a scheme to beat the landlord, and at the same time see a little of the country. He has constructed a home on wheels and from now on intends to migrate with the birds. The "flat for four" is built on the chassis of a touring car. There is a parlor, a bedroom and a bath, kitchenette and toilet as well. Running water, screened windows and every comfort of a modern flat. There is also a refrigerator that will take care of the ice and vegetables. It has everything. The photograph shows Mr. Wilder, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. G. Wilder, and G. B. Wilder, his grandson. Mrs. Wilder has started the evening meal on the gas stove.

CAUSE OF POUNDING ENGINE

If Regular and Continuous It Is Likely to Be From Lost Motion in the Bearings.

If a pound in the engine is regular and continuous it is likely to be from lost motion in the bearings. If it is irregular and occasional it is more likely to be due to preignition caused by incandescent carbon or from imperfect electrical connections. If the pounding is accompanied by occasional missing, especially if the missing is more frequent when the car is running than when the engine is idling, it is more apt to be due to imperfect electrical connections.

ESCHREW CHEAP GREASE CUPS

More Than Likely to Become Worthless in Short Time When New Ones Must Be Bought.

Cheap grease cups are more than likely to become worthless in a short time. It is almost impossible for the ordinary man to turn one of these cups down, and even if he is able to, the operation may not send the grease home where it is needed. The only remedy for this condition is to install really efficient grease cups or get a lubrication system of the kind that puts grease in the bearings under high pressure.

TO REPLACE VALVE SPRINGS

Good Plan to Compress Each in Vise Until Short Enough to Go Easily Into Place.

An easy way of replacing valve springs consists of compressing each spring in a vise until it is short enough to go easily into place and allowing the holding key to be inserted, and, while in this compressed condition, tying it with wire so that it cannot expand. After it is in place and the key is put in the wire is clipped and removed.

PLAN FOR THINNING CEMENT

High-Test Gasoline of Bisulphide of Carbon Is Proper Agent—Oil Is Deadly Foe.

The attention of car owners should be directed to the inadvisability of thinning rubber cement with ordinary gasoline, which contains too much oil to be safe for that purpose. Oil is a deadly foe of rubber. High-test gasoline or bisulphide of carbon is the proper agent for thinning rubber cement.

FIX CRACKED WATER JACKET

Not as Serious Trouble as Many Imagine—Examine to See if There Is Leak in Cylinder.

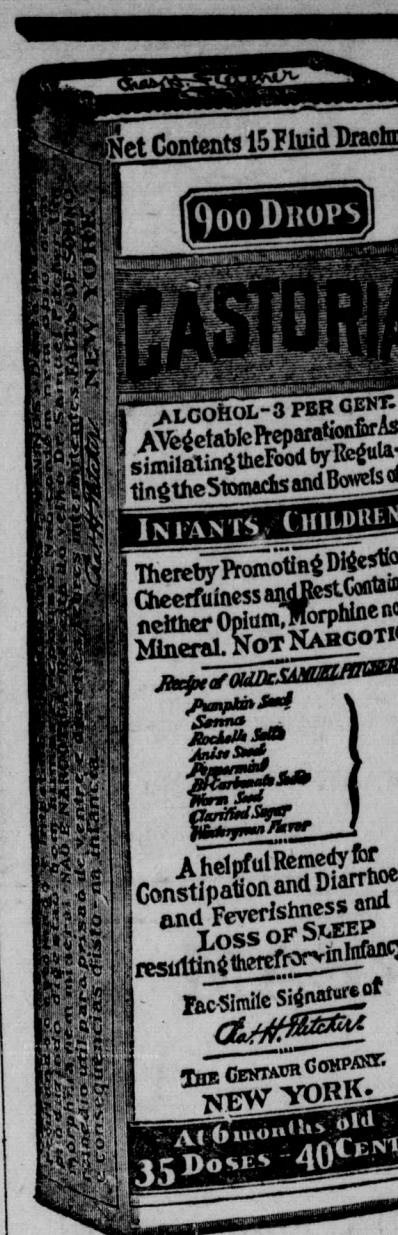

A cracked water jacket is not as serious trouble as one might imagine. The cylinder should be removed and the inside examined to make sure that there is no leak into the cylinder. If there is, that must be repaired also. If not, the leak in the water jacket can be welded and the casting made serviceable again.

AUTOMOBILE PAINTS

Vaseline to which a little powdered gum camphor has been added, the whole being heated over a slow fire, will prevent the formation of rust on tools.

A recently patented automobile windshield has a band of silvered glass along the top to serve as a rear vision mirror for all the occupants of a car.

When brakes squeak when applied it is due to the brake linings becoming worn so that the heads of the rivets holding the linings to the bands strike the drum.

"Are you afraid a very large campaign fund will impair confidence in your party?"

"Yes," answered the willing worker; "but too small a campaign fund will do the same thing."

Coffee drinkers, who switch from their accustomed table drink, almost always turn to Postum because of its delicious coffee-like flavor.

this splendid house of worship which, when completed, will give Bethany church a property unsurpassed anywhere for utility, solidity and beauty. Seeing that this entire work is carried on in faith and the work only proceeds as funds permit, the pastor is calling upon all christian friends interested to constant prayer and practical help so that there may be no cessation of the work until all is completed. The history and work of Bethany strongly commends itself to all who value true christian service, and is deserving of the support of all godly people.

MODERN CRANKCASE CLEANING SERVICE

Dirt in your Engine Oil— Get rid of it!

A LARGE quantity of dust-laden air is "inhaled" by the daily operation of an automobile engine. With this road dust, carbon and fine particles of metal get into the lubricating oil and circulate through your engine, lowering the efficiency of its operation. Add to this dirt the gasoline that escapes past the pistons and dilutes the oil—

Here you have a combination that wears and tears and grinds away, every day adding a little more dirt and forcing a little more unnecessary wear on bearing surfaces. Result: slow response—less power—poor performance—shorter engine life.

Our new Modern Crankcase Cleaning Service is the enemy of dirt in the crankcase—it means "clean oil in a clean engine." The Calol Flushing Oil we use is the new, scientific, thorough flushing agent that does not contaminate the fresh Zerolene refilled into your cleaned crankcase. This modern, convenient service, given quickly and at a nominal cost, returns your engine to you clean and fresh, ready to give that satisfactory performance you expect. Today: Bring in your car for Modern Crankcase Cleaning Service.
